Parenting for the Primary Years: 6 -12 Years

Workshop outline

If you have a primary school aged child, or a child moving into this stage, or are involved in raising children of this age, then this workshop is for you. You may be struggling with issues such as sibling rivalry, motivation in areas of health, homework and household chores, your child’s friendship squabbles, or are simply interested in ways to raise a child who can make morally informed choices in life, then this workshop is for you. Gain an insight into the workings of a teenager’s mind and develop strategies to encourage positive interactions. Learn the importance of balancing the need to let go and the increasing influence of peers whilst at the same time setting boundaries and maintaining the family bond.

The workshop will cover the following areas:

Emotional development – Through learning about how a primary school aged child develops psychologically, participants will gain an insight into the importance of teaching values and raising children to make morally informed choices in life.

Raising motivated children – Explore ways to motivate children by looking at opposing views based on fear or trust. Learn how to develop a number of personal attributes in children, such as self-confidence, perseverance, resiliency, accountability and adaptability. Apply this to practical issues such as health, homework and housework.

Teaching children to make and keep friends – Participate in some realistic role plays that cover the social and emotional rules of making and keeping friends during specific interactions, such as sharing, playing games and chatting.

Participants will receive a workbook with the content of the workshop as well as tip sheets on topics, such as ADD/ADHD, aggression, back chatting, bullying and teasing, empathy, family meetings, friends, gender rules, homework, lying, motivation, peer pressure, pocket money, sibling rivalry, study habits, swearing and TV/risc een time. In addition, a list of children’s books will be included, providing useful tools to help parents teach children about social/emotional issues at their level. A list of helpful telephone numbers and websites for parents and carers will also be included.

Feedback from past participants:

For 2006 and 2007, almost 100% of participants across all workshops rated the parenting programs as good/excellent. Here’s what some of them said:

“Great course. Highly recommend it.” Fairfax Media, Melbourne

“I learned some great strategies to deal with my toddler.” Lang and Simmons, Sydney

“It was well delivered under tough circumstances with four young children present. Really informative.” Dragons, Sydney

“The information was invaluable and enlightening.” Souths rugby league Club, Sydney

“Really enjoyable. Relaxing but presented with passion.” State Street, Sydney

Parenting Teenagers: 13 -18 Years

Workshop outline

If you are a parent of a teenager, have a child entering this often tumultuous stage, or are simply interested in why teenagers behave the way they do, then this workshop is for you. Gain an insight into the workings of a teenager’s mind and develop strategies to encourage positive interactions. Learn the importance of balancing the need to let go and the increasing influence of peers whilst at the same time setting boundaries and maintaining the family bond.

The workshop will cover the following areas:

Emotional development – Through learning about how a teenager develops psychologically, participants can gain an insight into how to manage their expectations effectively especially around issues such as independence versus boundaries and peer influence versus parental involvement.

Communicating with your teenager – How you talk and listen to your teenager will affect the way they behave, how you interact as a family, how conflict is dealt with, sibling rivalry, peer influence, school work and much more. Giving and receiving feedback is a practical process that can be learnt to make communication so much easier at this often difficult stage.

Managing family stress – Explore subconscious processes such as perceptions, beliefs, expectations, habits, values, feelings and self-talk. Look at how these interact with a teenager’s developing sense of self, peer influence and core family values.

Participants will receive a workbook with the content of the workshop as well as tip sheets on topics, such as aggression, back-chatting, friends, gender rules, lying, motivation, personality, TV/risc een time, and much more.

In addition, good books for teenagers will be recommended, providing useful tools to help teenagers manage the myriad of social/emotional issues at their level. A list of helpful telephone numbers and websites for parents and carers will also be included and cover areas, such as safe use of the internet, schoolies and depression.
